Jurns Urges U.S. dopt Tougher lules to Save Oil

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (WP).—Federal Reserve chairman ur Burns today prodded the Ford administration to move away voluntary "to stronger measures" for energy conservation, such "sizable" gas tax, a tax on imported oil, a tax on auto weight respower, or gasoline rationing.
What I'm talking about is a policy of austerity." Mr. Burns

Inter in the day, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said that President Ford had spent three hours yesterday evening going over the energy situation and is "still opposed" to an in-crease in gasoline taxes.

But Mr. Nessen said that administration officials are dismissing new proposals, along with an analysis of how the voluntary program is working, to be pre-sented to President Ford in about two weeks.

During his testimony, Mr. Burns revealed that the Treasury "has en quietly working" on a set of strong conservation measures "along the lines" he had mentioned. mentioned.

Mr. Burns urged Congress to begin preliminary planning for mandatory oil conservation at once, saying that, in his judgment, President Ford's voluntary proposals would prove in-

Ethiopia Military Spokesman Denies Plan to Kill Emperor

An Ethionian military spokesman today denied a report by a Beirut newspaper that deposed Emperor Haile Selassie may be executed in the next two days. He termed the report "irresponsible fabrications aimed at

The spokesman said the former emperor was still under guard in Addis Ababa. The deposed ruler was arrested in September. In Washington, the State Department said today that the Ethiopian Foreign Ministry had assured the U.S. Embassy in Ethiopia that there were no plans execute the former emperor.

> The reports fueled speculation that hardliners on the Supreme Military Council bave ordered an all-out offensive against the Eritrean Liberation Front, which has been fighting an intermittent war for independence for the last 10 years.

The guerrillas have about 3,000 active fighters.

Gen. Aman refused to sign an order directing reinforcement of the troubled province, the population of which is roughly half Moslem because he had hoped to reach a political peace agreement with the Kritrean Liberation Front. This issue was one of the factors that led to his resignation as head of the Military Council about two weeks ago and his eventual death. .

The elimination of Gen. Aman permits other council members, who range from fleld-grade officers to enlisted men, to take more vigorous action against the Liberation Front guerrillas. The guerrillas, however, have held out successfully against military pressure for 12 years.

The reinforcements moving to Eritres reportedly include units of the Imperial Guard, or 1st Army Division.

A possible reason for moving the Imperial Guard to Eritrea would be to forestall trouble from the locally based 2d Division. which some sources said had been fond of Gen. Aman, who had also been popular with the 3d Division, in eastern Ethiopia

A well-placed NATO source said that he doubted that "burden-sharing." as the issue is known, will loom large when NATO defense and foreign ministers meet here for their annual winter meeting Dec. 10-13.

In the past, these meetings have always seen U.S. secretaries of state and defense pressuring the Europeans to ease the American burden by paying more toward the upkeep of American troops in Europe.

Costs Totally Offset President Ford's most recent report said that these costs now seem to be totally offset. This, it said, was because of West German payments of $1.1 billion, plus payments by other Euro-peans of $800 million. Both NATO and U.S. sources admitted privately that this conclusion stemmed from bookkeeping by Pentagon accountants un-der orders to keep U.S. troops in Enorpe. Under this bookkeeping, European arms purchases that had never been included in offset costs before were wrapped into the new figures.

But the European nations also face a payments outflow of $40 billion this year because of higher oil prices. U.S. officials said that the Europeans are probably unable to pay more to the United States, no matter how much U.S. pressure is applied.

Major Turkish Party Plans To Vote Against New Cabinet

Republican People's party (RPP) announced today that it would vote against the new cabinet of Premier Sadi Irmak, assuring its defeat and reopening a government crisis.

In other developments, Turkey devalued its currency against West European currencies, politicians predicted trouble if Archbishop Makarios returns to Cyprus and new campus violence erupted between rightist and leftist students.

The RPP, led by former Premier Bulent Ecevit, said that it had decided to vote against the Irmak government in Friday'e confidence vote in the National Assembly.

In his speech, the King conceded that "during the past, mistakes were made which weakened our democratic way of life." But he repeatedly vowed to treat all Greeks equally and safeguard their civil rights.

Coup in 1967 After the military coup in April, 1967, the young King co-operated with the new regime for several months. In December, 1967, he tried, and falled, to lead a revolt and fled the country.

As he portrayed his record last night, he had never "stopped struggling" for the "political lib-eration" of Greece. To his critics, however, his efforts have been consistently feeble and inept.

Most analysts here expect the country to choose a republic. The three major opposition parties all adamantly oppose the King. Premier Caramanlia, traditionally a royalist, has refused to take a public stand.
One reason is that Mr. Caramanils's party, the New Democracy, is seriously split on the matter. According to his aides, the Premier also feels that the monarchy issue has bedeviled Greek politics for too long, and should not become the subject of partisan debate. Reform Proposals

Mr. Caramanlis is drafting re-form proposals to strengthen the powers of the Premier's office, his sides say. Under this plan, the head of state could be either a president, on the West German model, or e monarch, along British lines.

The royalists argue that King Constantine would be "King of all the Greeks," while a president would inevitably favor political allies. They are also trying to cash in on the Greek desire for tranquillity by portraying the King as a figure of stability and

Mr. Caramanlis struck a similar note when his party won more than 54 per cent of the vote in parliamentary elections last week.

The government will silow the police to hold and question those suspected of terrorism for up to a week without charges, but the maximum period has always been rather blurred. Along with its ban of the IRA the govern-ment will prohibit the wearing of any item of clothing that might reasonably be taken for part of the IRA uniform. But sartorial freedom does not seem threatened since few Londoners would normally be wearing black berets,

A bigger breach of constitutional normality will come if, as expected, the government assumes powers to send people back to Northern Ireland or to prevent them from coming over.

Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom and a measure controlling the internal movements of UK. residents is unusual, if not totally unprecedented.

One of the ironies involvedconsidering that it is directed against an organization whose passionate objective is separation of the North from Britain-is that such a measure would underline this separation.

At the moment, however, opinion here has been jolted as it has not been since the IRA went seriously to work in 1970. Birmingham on Friday was a city badly shaken, badly frightened not only of what the IRA might do but of what the city's people -90 per cent English, 10 per cent Irish-might do to themselves.

Even London which has re-mained almost unmarked by ex-plosions in the Tower of London, the Houses of Parliament, White-hall, and at Old Balley court seems to be stirring.

At least six persons were wounded. Scotland Yard said that two bombs exploded in London's Chelses district, one in a mail box. Another charge was reported to have detonated outside Chelses army barracks.

The continuation of a campaign of major bloodshed here would have other unpredictable effects. A curtailment of civil liberties far more drastic than anything proposed so far would be likely. There would undoubtedly be calls for the formation of citizens vigilante groups. There is also the danger of a backlash against the one million Irish-born residents in Britain.

Unity Appeal To Laborites By Callaghan

Mr. Callaghan, who is party chairman, was opening Labore annual party convention, attended by more than 1,360 delegates from the rank and file and from affiliated trade unions.

The convention met amid a continuing dispute over which is boss, the party's national exmembers of Parliament.

Vladivostok Accord Is Said To Allow Increase in MIRV

By Murrey Marder and Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (WP). -The proposed U.S.-Soviet accord for "capping" total numbers of missiles and bombers in each of the two superpowers' arsenals reportedly allows each side to considerably expand the numbers of its multiple warhead missiler

The levels agreed to in Vladi-vostok by President Ford and Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev would permit the Russians far higher numbers of multiple warheads, or MIRVe, than U.S. strategists have desired, administration and congressional sources disclosed yesterday.

As a result, a potentially costly building of existing U.S. multiple warheads is anticipated, to match the high level set for the Soviet Union. This buildup is defended on, one side as a justifiable price for "putting a cap" on the arms race, while critics yesterday began to assel the new MIIRV missile ceiling as "astonishingly large." Under the tentative accord, the total ceiling on each country's strategic nuclear forces, as reported earlier, will be just under 2,500 missiles and bombers. The most critical number in the ten-tative arms package, however, is unofficially reported to be the about 1,300 missiles with MIRVtype multiple warheads to be permitted on each side.

Atomic Warhends

MIRV missiles carry several ato ic warbeads on a single rocket and can send each warhead to a separate target. Informed sources conceded that the MIRV ceiling was well beyond the level sought by President Ford or his predecessor, Richard Nixon. The 1300 range was described as almost twice as high as the 600-to-700-missile level Mr. Nixon proposed for the Rusing with Mr Brezhnev last June. At that time, a different type of agreement was sought, over a shorter time. What was agreed to by President Ford and Mr. Brezhnev at Viadivostok, administration offi-cials said, were the best figures on which the United States could obtain Russian agreement. The numbers are said to be 40 per cent below what the Soviet Union is capable of deploying if there had been no accord. The impact of the new arms pact, if approved by Congress, would be substantia. Sources said it would force a new top-level study of what kind of nuclear forces the United States should have and would expand defense spending on new types of weap-

For example, a large new Soviet force c. MIRV-equipped landbased ICEMs, which could be ful-ly deployed in six or seven years, would undoubtedly he viewed as a threat to U.S. land-based missiles and thus give impetus to U.S. programs now in the development stage, such as mobile ICBMs that would be carried in transport planes or on truckr It may also give a boost to putting a greater share of the U.S. missiles on submarines, where they are virtually invulnerable to

The Pentagon and White House had been planning to expand the Minuteman-3 ICBM force from '550 to 600 starting late next year. Now those plans are uncertain because a review will be made to determine if the United States should put the extra missiles it will be allowed on land, in the air or under the sea.

The United States has 470 Minnteman-3 ICBMs, each carrying three MIRV warbeads, in silos, ready to fire. Another 80 will be installed by next year to bring the number up to the 550 authorized. The rest of the 1,000-missile Minuteman force is made up of 450 single-warhead Minuteman-2

The United States also has 23 operational MIRV-equipped Poseidon submarines out of 31 plan-

Mr. Kissinger was here for the four days before that with President Gerald Ford, and Mr. Kissinger also returned Sunday after being with Mr. Ford in Vladivostok. He met with Japanese Foreign Minister Toshio Kimura Monday and discussed the Japanese-French conference.

According to both French and American officials, the Japanese position has remained consistent, About two weeks ago, the Japanese government announced that it officially supports the French position in principle. But as a French diplomat explained, "They support our principles, but do not oppose the American solutions."

Japan Vulnerable All sides claim to recognize the peculiar Japanese vulnerability because it imports over 99 per cent of its oil, "We don't want to cause any ill reactions from the produc-

French position. But at the same time they are hopeful of driving down the high-price of oil, which the Americans are intent upon doing. They have joined in other concerted - consumer actions, such as the new International Energy Agency. In a Hurry "We think the French are in too much of a hurry to meet with the producing countries," a For-strategy for closing the energy gap stems from the Project Independence report, released two weeks ago by the Federal Energy That report set forth two basic patterns that would result from either acceptance of an $11 price per barrel of crude oil in the world market or early reduction of the world oil price to $7 a As the FEA data indicate, the rate of growth of domestic production would be much faster at $11 than $7 and there would be a far greater drag on the growth of oil contumption. By 1985, at the $11 price, according to the PEA's study, the expanded supply of oil-plus expanded output of coal and nuclear energy—could eliminate the need for imported

But at the $7 price per barrel of oil, the gap could widen to about 13 million barrels a day, or more than half of all the United States's petroleum needs. The American dependency—and probably foreign dependency as well—on OPEC oil would increase rather than narrow, according to the FEA projections

High-Price Strategy ... The starting news broken by Mr. Enders at Yale—starting against the background of repeat-ed declarations of high American officials that OPEC nations must reduce their exorbitantly high prices—is that the United States is now basing its strategy on the

This is what, in informal discussion, he called the catch-22 of the U.S. position: It is designed to reduce Western dependency on foreign oil and ultimately to break the OPEC oil price, but when the oil price comes down, the United States and its partners will hold up their own oil prices to protect high-cost domes-

Thus, as the price for foreign United States and its partners would move toward a two-tier cost structure for energy: *One that assures the consuming countries their desired degree of independence; the other balances a constant demand and growing supply for imported oil at prices that diminished, or even reversed, the accumulation of assets by producers," he said. .

FEA had overestimated future oil production in this country as well as reliance on nuclear power and other energy sources. The political feasibility of the

Kissinger-Enders plan is also questionable. Other nations, such as France, might refuse to go along and, if the United States and its partners did succeed in driving down the world oil price the outsiders would have a clear cost advantage in production and competition in world trade Questions can also be raised about the very heavy emphasis on expanding production at high cost. President Ford has thus far backed an essentially "voluntary" program of restraining consumption, rejecting proposals even for moderate increases in gasoline Higher Taxes

But the new program could send gasoline taxes far higher...

unless, as is possible, the United States still had, in addition to two tiers for world and domestic prices, two or more additional tiers for "old" and "new" of produced in the United States, as Mr. Jamieson estimated that, at an average price of $11 a barrel for crude oil, the price of a gallon of gasoline in the United States would be 83 cents—far higher than the price at the pump that would result from even a 20-cent rise in the gasoline tax. If the United States did fall behind the President's goal of a reduction of I million barrels a day in consumption, he might propose a stiffer plan for cutting Behind the U.S. position on energy, as developed by Mr.

Enders, is the belief that the only way the United States can get a handle on the crisis is via its international dangers—and that is also the only way Americans can be brought to see the urgency of the crisis. And the most paradoxical aspect is that the United States, in fighting to bring down the OPEC price, means to keep its own price high. -

Robber Drew Revolver in Bar, Then His Troubles Really Began NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y., Nov. 27 (AP).—A would-be robber ran into trouble after he drew a gun in a bar here and announced a holdup. The problems began when the bar's manager grabbed the

38-caliber revolver and tossed it to a barmaid. She dropped the gun through a hole in the floor into the basement. The gunman demanded that someone recover the weapon, but everybody ignored him. Frustrated, the man ran outside, where he slipped on the first ice of the season and was arrested by a policeman who had been checking out the man's car. The auto, which the police said had been stolen, was parked with its motor running on the wrong side of the street. The police booked the man yesterday on charges that included attempted robbery, attempted assault, possession of an unloaded firearm and possession of a stolen antomobile.

First Fruits of Liberty

Few Americans will be complacent on this Thanksgiving Day of 1974, when, whatever the feast that is spread before them, the price in dollars and cents must haunt them at least a little; when they know that many in their own land and more, many more, in other regions perforce go without. The very abundance of America in a time of global atringency seems a reproach.

Yet it should be a source of gratitude, for without it, and without the skills that went into its creation, where would be the hope of the world today? That the abundance should be used with wisdom and with generosity is a moral obligation upon the Americans, yet surely they need not feel guilt for all that they and their ancestors wrought in making a granary of a wilderness.

For the complexity of the American experience, and for its meaning today, it is worthwhile to turn again to that original feast of Thanksgiving, in Plymouth, more than three and a half centuries ago, when the Pilgrims first arrived in the still new world. to make, as Stephen Vincent Benet once wrote, "a small bustling noise in an empty land." The land was not, fortunately for them, quite empty, nor was it, in William Bradford's phrase. "a hideous and desolate wilderness full of wild heasts and wild men." It was a rude land, with extremes of cold and heat that most Europeans had never experienced, and the Indians who met them represented a culture that was to the immigrants fearsome and strange. But the soil was rich; some Indians taught the newcomers new methods of planting the new Indian corn. and after a bitter winter there was a good harvest.

So they summoned their Indian neighbors, and together gave thanks. In part, it was the ancient feast of first-fruits; in part it was a thought brought over from the Netherlands where the Pilgrims had lived in religious exile: a day of thanksgiving for independence won. So it was a festival of the first fruits of liberty, in a land where the fruits were one day to nourish more than 200 million people, living in liberty, and sharing their abundance with many more.

The massiveness of this achievement should not and will not he allowed to obscure the inequities and wrongs that, along with high idealism and plain hard work, went into lts making. The Indians, those who helped the Pilgrims or those who fought against the European invasion, lost their lands and the culture that was built upon their way of life. Slaves were imported from Africa; newcomers were exploited by those who had preceded them; some hecame wealthy; some lived out lives of poverty and want. Yet these evils flourished elsewhere in the world, often in greater quantity or greater intensity. What was unique in the United States was that with a great measure of human liberty came a great enrichment of the natural wealth of a continent.

And so not only Americans, but those of other nations, can give thanks today, in all humility. For those to whom Thanksgiving is a native feast, there cannot be pride alone. nor need there be guilt alone. The sharing of the feast should not be an act of condescension, but neither should it be one of penance, or self-flageliation. Rather, let it he in the spirit of that first Thanksgiving, when alien peoples met, each bringing what It could to a common table, for a common

U Thant and the UN

U Thant was not the most imaginative Secretary-General of the United Nations but he seemed an indispensable one for most of his unprecedented tenure. When Dag Hammarskjold died in an African plane crash in 1961, the mild and gentle Buddhist from Burma was the only figure on the UN scene on whom all blocs and factions-including the two competing superpowers-could unite. This was no less true when he was unanimously chosen for the full term in 1962 and again when he was drafted for re-election

Universal acceptability did not give Mr. Thant lasting immunity from criticisms of member governments, but it did allow him to go quietly about the business of shoring up an organization in deep crisis. With the United Nations again today in both a constitutional and a moral crisis, provoked by flouting of the rules and manipulation of mindless majoritles by the Afro-Arab-Asian alliance, U Thant's genius for compromise and his deft ability to calm emblttered relationships are deeply missed. In his subtle way, Mr. Thant might well have been able to head off the worst excesses and dangerous precedents of the current General Assembly majority: the arbitrary suspension of a founding member (Sonth Africa); the curbing of Israel's rights to speak in its own defense against the Arab phalanx, the weleome to the leader of a terrorist organization with the deference normally reserved to a head of state.

Mr. Thant's even-handed conduct persuaded the Soviet Union to shelve its demand for replacing the secretary-general with a "troika"-one representative each for the Soviet bloc, the West and the neutral nations-a revamping that would have completely paralyzed the UN secretariat and administration.

Though never regarded as an activist or innovator who exploited the implied powers of his office in the manner of Mr. Hammarskjold or Trygve Lie, Mr. Thant did take initiatives on his own. Perhaps the most significant was his order to the UN troops in the Congo to use force to crush the Katangan secession. He helped mediate the India-Pakistan clash in Kashmir, then President Kennedy gave credit to his efforts. vis-à-vis both Washington and Moscow, to resolve the Cuban missile crisis in 1963.

Mr. Thant was unable to involve the UN effectively in attempts to settle the Vietnam war and he failed-even as his predecessors and successor have failed—to preside over a UN settlement of the Middle East conflict. Critics said he could have forestalled the Arah-Israeli war of 1967 by playing for time before acceding to Egypt's demand for withdrawal of UN forces from Gaza and Sinal; hut Mr. Thant insisted that he bad taken every practical step for which he had authority in his effort to bead off that

In serving as secretary-general longer than either of his predecessors, Mr. Thant did not succeed in bolstering the United Nations machinery for peace or in reconstructing its swolien and inefficient bureaucracy. He did manage for 10 critical years to keep the UN alive and functioning, and it is doubtful that anyone in that period could have done much

Slaughter in Ethiopia

After carrying out a gradual and bloodless revolution over the past nine months. Ethiopia's young military rulers bave shocked the world by abruptly executing 60 former government officials and aristocrats close to the deposed Emperor Haile Selassie. Among the victims were Gen. Aman Michael Andom, who headed the provisional government until last week, and former premier Endalkachew Makkonen, a serious candidate for secretary general of the United Nations only three years ago.

What could have ignited the bestial passions that drove the young officers of the Provisional Military Council to mass slaughter in flagrant violation of their promise of a fair trial for all political prisoners? Was It simply a "mad act by a bunch of frightened men," as the Zamblan government newspaper declared? Most of those executed had been in custody for months and appeared to be incapable of challenging the military regime.

Gen. Aman may have been a threat, for he was highly popular with soldiers and peasants alike, and was obviously unwilling to be a figurehead, leaving real power to the shadowy council chairman, Maj. Mengistn Haile Mirlam. When Gen. Aman was removed last week, the council accused him of acting as a dictator and exceeding his mandate. An Eritrean himself, he reportedly refused to order more troops to that volatile province, preferring to try to negotlate with the rebel Eritrean Liberation In any event, neither the council's differences with Gen. Aman nor the acts of corruption and neglect charged against the other prisoners can explain the killings by military men who hitherto had taken pride in the humane character of their revolution. This act is certain to provoke unrest and eventual retribution in Ethiopia. It will also raise for the Organization of African Unity the question whether to continue making its headquarters in Addis Ababa.

NEW YORK-There are two contradictory interpretations of the Ford-Brezhnev "tentative" agreement on the control of offensive nuclear weapons. The first, defined by the White House press secretary. Ronald Nesseo. was that it was a "briumph" for arms control, and the second was that it was a delayed Soviet trap to assure Moscow of U.S. trade and modern technology.

The chances are that it was neither. It was a sudden, vague, and surprising "breakthrough" in principle, as Secretary of State Kissinger called it, and an in-dication that the leaders of the Soviet Union want to cootinue their policy of peaceful coexis-tence with the United States, or at least avoid a break with Washington in the foreseeable future.

In political terms, this is reassuring. The Soviet leaders might have taken a more belligerent line. The Western nations are in serious economic and political trouble. President Ford has not established his authority over the United States government, or even organized his new administraon. And from the Azores, through Europe and the Mediter-ranean and the Middle East to Japan, the free nations are divided and disorganized.

Détente Supported

At least in the Ford-Brezhnev meeting at Vladivostok, the Soviet leaders didn't try to take advantage of the disarray of the West, but supported the policy of détente with the United States. agreed on a long-term control of the numbers of nuclear weapons, avoided arguments over Europe and Japan, and gave at least tentative approval to peace and national independence to all nations in the Middle East, includ-

Meanwhile it is clear that the Soviet leaders are being very careful. They have apparently concluded that a major disruption of the detente policy would probably produce a violent antinmunist reaction in the United States, and maybe a Jackson presidency, or even a Reagan-Wallace campaign in 1976.

· In any event, and for whatever reasons, the Russians have agreed to a ceiling on all main strategic weapons systems, equal to the United States. They have dropped their claim that all American forward-based planes in Europe the strategic balance, and concentrated on a Moscow-Washington compromise in which they will get trade and technology in return for arms control.

The arms control, however, will still leave both sides with enough weapons to blow up the world. The main thing, in the immediate future, is what the Vladivostok communiqué said about the Middle East. It was extremely vague.

Ford and Brezhnev merely 'reaffirmed their intention to make every effort to promote a solution of the key issues of a just and lasting peace in that area on the basis of the UN Resolution 338, with due account taken of the legitimate interests of all peoples of the area, including the Palestinian people, and respect for the rights of all the states of the area to independent existence."

merely evaded the central issue. Ford and Brezhnev did not really apply their noble principles to the Middle East. They are both shipping modern weapons into the area. It is probably wrong to assume that Brezhnev was setting a trap for Ford, agreeing to a nuclear compromise in principle, merely to get trade and technology agreements through the Congress, but Brezhnev did not really deal with the major crisis in the Middle East. And this is what really worries Washington and the other capitals of the world.

How Kissinger Got SALT Breakthrough

By Victor Zorza

WASHINGTON—The explanation given by President Ford for the SALT breakthrough explains nothing. Why, be was asked, had the Russians agreed to it? "It is my best judgment," he answered, "that they are deeply concerned about the arms race." Of course they are. But

Kissinger, and the debate on SALT-2 will no donht be as long and as bitter as the debate on SALT-1. The Kremlin, it would appear from his account, has suddenly been converted to the view-which he had been urging on it for years—that both sides were getting too many nuclear weapons, and it promptly decided to agree to a lower ceiling. "I would suppose," he said, "that the general secretary

What this unlovely phrase means is that Mr. Ford will be a candidate in 1976, with a good chance to stay on in the White House until 1980, thus keeping Sen. Jackson out of it. He won't be a lame duck, as Mr. Nixon would have been if be had survived Watergate. Indeed, it looks as if the Vladivostok agreement is based on a tacit understanding between the White House and the Kremlin to keep Jackson at bay and to help re-elect

Rissinger's critics would view it as an unscrupulous political ploy in much the same way as they viewed his travels to Peking and Moscow and his Vietnam peace negotiations, which they saw as part of Mr. Nixon's re-election campaign. Dual Sovereignty for Jerusalem

ONDON,-When we unanimously passed Security Council Resolution 242 in November. 1967, we made no direct reference to Jerusalem, Better, we UN delegates thought, to state the overriding purposes first. But in-creasingly it has become clear that without a settlement in Jerusalem there will never be peace.

Everything else depends on Jerusalem. The Holy City is as important as it is unique. If there is no settlement in Jerusalem, Secretary of State Kissinger need fly to the Middle East no more, the Geneva Conference need not meet again. For to ignore or postpone the status of Jerusalem is to deceive.

Why do you think 947 foreign companies set up in Belgium last year?

Since Brussels became capital of the Common Market, more and more foreign companies have been making their headquarters in Belgium.

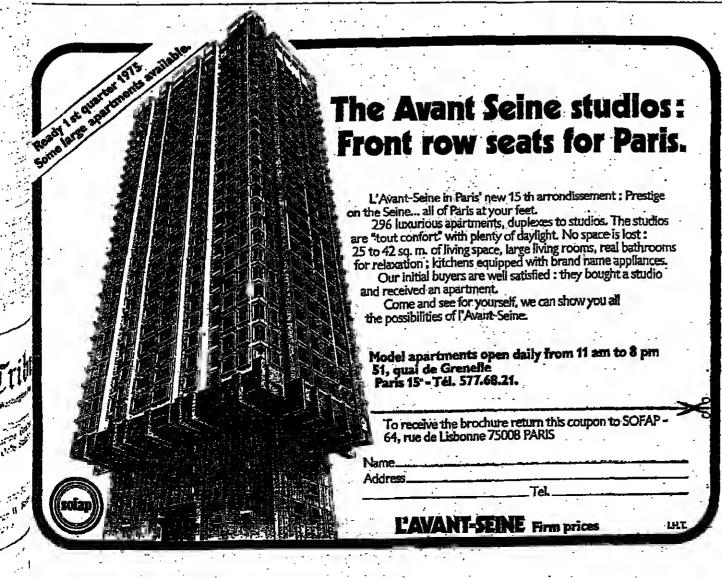

Manufacturers, international banks, food companies, property developers... they're all coming. Why?

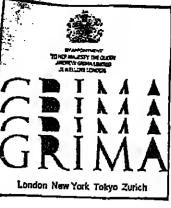

First, because Brussels is increasingly the central point of contact and the information bank for the new Europe. If you need facts or you need to meet key people, the place to find them is Belgium:

This means that if you're planning a business trip to Europe, the logical point of entry is Brussels. And the logical way of getting there is, naturally, the airline that knows Brussels best. Sabena.

Apart from the traditional Belgian hospitality which you will enjoy aboard our new wide-bodied Boeing 707's, 737's, 747's and Mc Donnell Douglas DC-10's, Sabena can offer you a unique commercial intelligence service - not just for Belgium but for most countries where you're likely to do business.

WASHINGTON—The U.S. State Department has stepped in to help reunite a young American oman with her husband, a Latvian athlete who has been barred from leaving his home in the Soviet Union.

Included on the list are 16 individuals who have been recognized as U.S. citizens, parents separated from their children and husbands and wives who have been barred from emigration hy the Soviet government.

Despite the general improvement in relations between Moscow and Washington, the number of humanitarian cases awaiting action by the Kremlin has remained the same for many years. The Soviet government closes some cases each year by allowing individuals to emigrate but new cases are added just as fast. The Soviets seem to act more quickly on newer cases than on the old.

Three weeks ago, the Soviets reportedly granted permission for Eleanora Iechepene to leave Lithuania 30 years after she first applied for an exit visa. Born in New York, she had been taken as a child to Lithuania when it was an independent country before World War II.

Her brother, John Atkash, said Monday he had not yet heard when Mrs. Iechepene would actually leave the Soviet Union. Her case was the oldest on the representation list.

Less Than a Year

By contrast, Simas Kudirka, a Lithuanian seaman who had been in a prison camp after trying to defect from a Soviet fishing vessel in 1970, came to the United States earlier this month, less than a year after his claim to U.S. citizenship was recognized. The case of Mrs. Donins illustrates the problems generated by the rapidly increasing number of marriages between U.S. and Soviet citizens.

Most of the rising number of East-West romances stem from the increased number of American students and tourists visiting claims for coming to the United the Soviet Union and the flow of Soviet visitors to the United States on official exchanges in the last few years of political de-

> "We expect to see 40 or 50 marriages this year compared with 25 or 30 last year," a State Department official said.

There are 15 cases pending, five men and 10 women, in which the Soviets have refused permission for their citizens to join American spouses. There are many other cases where a spouse has applied for permission to leave and has yet to receive an answer.

The Grounds

Mrs. Donins waited several weeks to call for official assis tance while her husband waited for the government to decide his

"The grounds for his denial are based on the fact that my husband, figuratively speaking, is an officer in the Soviet Army," she said. "Janis is a track and field athlete, a javelin thrower and one of the Soviet Union's best. To maintain his status as an amateur and thus enable him to compete on the international level, he was accorded the title an officer in the Soviet Army and was paid by them.

"This is the extent of his military experience and knowledge. He was never trained as a soldier. was never on active service and never had access to military Mrs Donins met her husband in 1969 when she was a student at the University of Southern California and he was visiting Los Angeles with the Soviet track team. They corresponded and met more times and in January, 1972, were married in Riga.

'Miserable' Life

"We decided to live in the Soviet Union to protect my husband'e relatives from harassment and mistreatment they would receive if we chose to leave," she continued. "Our efforts were to uo avail and Soviet officials made lifa completely miserable for us

"Unable to stand it any longer, and realizing our only hope for living a normal life lay in coming to the United States to live, I left the Soviet Union with my daughter in 1974." In recent years, young Soviet citizens who have married Americans have been able to leave the country about six months after the wedding.

Simas Kudirka . . . Lithuanian seaman.

There have been cases where it took more than a year, however.
"The Soviets try to prevent the marriages but once a person gets permission and goes through the ceremony he is likely to get out," an official explained.

When a Soviet citizen applies to marry a foreigner, he is likely to be fired from his job and his family will be harassed. Parents have been expelled from the Communist party and demoted from their jobs when their child be-came engaged to a foreigner.

Foreigners have been expelled and barred from returning to the country, thus preventing planned marriages. This pressure has been successful in ending some romances and in one recent case caused a woman to withdraw her application to join her American husband

In another recent case, a Russian woman left her husband 24 hours after arriving in the United States, telling him she had gone through the ceremony only as a way of getting out of her home-

Fighting Sexism in U.S. Schools

By Lisa Hammel

OLD WESTBURY, N.Y. (NYT). "They have so isw re-sources. And once they're saddled with a child, it's all over. Their lives are ended," said Isabel Byron, who teaches English and women's studies at a minority high school in New York.

"By the time they're 3, little girls in mursery school are already quite well aware of what they're supposed to be They're stuck in the doll corner doing repetitive house chores And they also know that what the boys do is going to be different—and superior." Seime Greenberg, a specialist in early childhood education who teaches at Hofstra University.

And in the classroom, she added, "no one considers it insp-propriate behavior that the girls are passive and unassertive, But these girls are the ones who fall apart at 35."

"In our town, when a boy graduates from high school, he can get a job at the paper mill and earn $10,000 a year," said Yolanda Bulley, a fourth-grade teacher from Millinocket, Maine, "But there is nothing happening in the chool to show a young female that her only options don't have to be punching a cash register in the five-and-ten for 40 bucks a week or waiting on tables." What these women were talk-

Or name, it means the same thing, the influencing of children, through the educational process, to see themselves in certain stereotypical ways that often narrow their present behavior and limit their aspirations for the

A Warning But Jacqueline Clement, assistant superintendent of schools in Hanover, N.H., and one of the few educational administrators attending the conference, warned against too much optimism. "Ninety per cent of the supervisors and teachers in the country have no idea of what we're talking about. You're not dealing with people who have any awareness of the issue except as a joke. And it's hard to change teachers' and administrators' attitudes, because most of them are traditional people in a traditional profession. You don't know many swinging superintendents of school systems, do you?

La Créole sits on a sendy fringe of the Sinal surveying the tawny hills of Saudi Arabia six miles across the cobalt gulf. On a picture postcard, the scenery would be dismissed as a lie. Plays

"The Prodigal Sister" is a new black musical by Micki Grant (music, lyrics) and J.E. Franklin (book, lyrics). The essential quality of the production, according to Clive Barnes, is "artlessness." The story is the good old biblical fable of the prodigal son; here made into a daughter and up-dated to modern times. The daughter is Jackie, a high school kid who finds herself pregnant. Not wanting to get rid of the haby, she leaves home for the big city, where she soon encount-ers disaster. But eventually she finds her way home to the hosom of her family and forgiveness." Much of the production is inten-tionally naive, and, Barnes says, "the whole show has a beguiling dexterity that skillfully disguises the hard work that has clearly

"End of Summer," the 1936 comedy by S.N. Behrman, is a revival with "historic as well as a social value" writes Mel Gussow. The central character, Leonie, squanders her life on various par-acites. For a contemporary au-dience, however, her character appears "self-binding and a lit-tle foolish." Gussow finds that "Much of the fun in this playand there is a great deal of fun in the play—is watching Mr. Behrman's devious twists and turns. There is always one more plot machination as the author manipulates his characters. These are straw figures, but the mechanism is letter perfect." The actors, under Ronald Roston's "straightforward" direction, "effectively convey the unbridled enthusiasm of cause - conscious youth."

"Generations of Green Fields" is new Yiddish theater, based on the works of Peretz Eirshbein adapted and directed by David Licht with music and lyrics by Lazar Weiner and Itschak Perlow. Richard Shepard says, "Contrary to most Yiddish dramas, Green Fields has a fairly simple story line, with the complexitie and depths emerging in the telling. It is the story of a pious humane and tolerant man who i persuaded to become the teache of hardy Jewish farmers in th Ukraine toward the end of the 1800s." Most beguiling, says Shep ard, "Is the cast, an attractive assortment of talent, young are handsome, and older and superb ly seasoned — unfortunately to many to single out." Hershel For and Zypora Spaisman are perhap the most impressive.

'Last Tango' Not a 'Publication' A Judge Says in Landmark Ruling

LONDON, Nov. 27 (Reuters).—An obscenity complaint again the film "Last Tango in Paris" was thrown out of Britain's Centra Criminal Court today on a point of law that has significance for the British film industry. The ruling was considered a landmark Judge Kenneth Jones ruled that exhibiting a film was not a "publication" in terms of the Obscene Publications Act. He directed the jury to return a not-guilty verdict against the film's distributors United Artists, regardless of whether they considered the Marlot Brando film obscene.

The case arose from a private prosecution brought by a retired Salvation Army officer, Edward Sbackleton, 69. No film had previously been charged under the Obscene Publica Films in-Britain are normally viewed by a board of censors s

... And It Seems to Work!

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AF-DJ) .- Securities trading has not been as disastrous for brokers as study by the industry's major trade group

The Securities Industry Association survey discloses that the prefex earnings of the average broker dealing with the general public—the retail salesman rose 36 per cent last year to $18,500 from $13,600 in 1970, the date of the trade group's previous study. The findings of the latest survey, contained in a 58-page confidential report, were obtained from an industry

The report says earnings of managers of bro-kerage firm branch offices and salesmen dealing with financial institutions also rose about the same rate as their retail colleagues-37 per centduring that span. But, the study shows, those two types earn roughly twice as much as the typical broker. The average branch manager and institutional salesman each earned $37,000 in 1973, compared with $27,000 three years earlier.

The earnings gains for all three categories more than offset the rise in the cost of living during that period. The Labor Department's con-sumer price index stood at 133.1 at the end ef 1973, up 10 per cent from 1163 at the end of 1970.

Ironically, the results are being sent to the 80 brokerage firms that participated in the study et a time when the industry is complaining of financial woes in an effort to stave off the imposition next May 1 of fully negotiated bro-kerage rates as mandated by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Big Firms Asked to Use Conduct Code

Action in W. Germany To Be Extended Later BONN, Nov. 27 (AP),-Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has proposed that U.S. multinational corporations agree to a voluntary code of behavior regulating their West German activities because of growing criticism that they are insensitive to local interests.

Ernst Wolf Mommsen, board chairman of Germany's giant. Krupp industrial concern, report-ed the proposal to newsmen after serving as co-chairman of a twoday conference called by the Bonn government to discuss with U.S. and German business, executives "the future role of multinational concerns." Mr. Mommsen said Mr. Schmidt's suggestion when be opened the conference behind closed doors Monday was that this "good behavior code" apply to the West German subsidiaries of U.S.-based corporations. Once the code becomes practice here, its expansion to other West European countries would be considered.

German officials last month complained that the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Germany was close to interfering in the country's domestic affairs when it tried to get the State Depar-ment and Congress to oppose a controversial labor relations hill of the Bonn government.

The bill would give workers an equal vote with shareholders in running the supervisory boards of major West German concerns, including subsidiaries of U.S. companies.

Mr. Mommsen said the pro-posed code also would defuse criticism that the local subsidjaries of the multinationals cannot be sufficiently controlled U.S. firms represented at the conference included IBM, National Cash Register, American Canning Corp., Mobil Oil, Honeywell, IT&T, and Exxon. Chrysler's Size May Shrink

DETROIT, Nov. 27 (AP-DJ) .-Chrysler Corp. may emerge from its current troubles as a substantially smaller enterprise.

Over the next month or two Chrysler will plunge deeply into debt to its banks. Its first-quar-ter dividend, normally declared in February, will probably be cut from the usual 35 cents. And the third-ranking U.S. auto maker is not expected to show any profit for this year.

The longer-range objective, chairman Lynn Townsend says, is to slash costs to a point where the break-even volume will be 300,000 vehicles below the current level. While the company will not say what that level is, 300,000 units would represent nearly 10 per cent of 1973,s record 3.4 mililon vehicles built by Chrysler worldwide.

Chrysler officials insist the company's foreign operations are greatly enlarged its overseas empire in the 1960s, to become more like GM and Ford. But now those operations have fallen on hard imes, too, and some analysts believe Chrysler may have to trim them. The overseas units, for example, posted a $19.2-million deficit in the third quarter, dragging the parent company $8 miltion into deficit. Chairman Townsend's goal of cutting costs to the point where petitors are not impressed. Many of the sales are a result capita!

As Result of Slumping Sales A key spending cutback was to be the permanent closing of the company's old and inefficient Jefferson Avenue assembly plant in Detroit. That step has now been delayed at least until summer by intense pressure from local government and civic lead-

> But it may still be taken later on. By Chrysler's reckoning, elimination of that facility would allow it to build the same number of cars in five U.S. plants as it does now in six, with a huge reduction in fixed costs.

If you bank with the Midland, you're in business in Europe.

The idea is, start in Britain and work your way around to the rest of the Continent.
Which is not a new idea, but now that Britain is in the Common Market, it's a better one.

Particularly if you consider it from the point of view of your European banking requirements.

Midland Bank can handle everything for you.

_ EBIC. The other European Economic Community.

Midland a great British bank is also a participant in European Banks International (EBIC), a group of 7 of the great banks of Europe with almost 9,000 branches.

So when you start to do business in Europe you won't have to go through the tortuous discussions and the usual yards of red tape that are normally required to make arrangements with different banks in different countries.

Midland and other banks participating in EBIC act like one bank. At a moment's notice you'll be able to arrange complete full service banking facilities on a local basis at any one of the branches of the EBIC Banks.

Fast money.

It also gives you a means of moving money around at the speed of a telex machine.

Arrange the money through any branch of the Midland in Britain and it can be made available for you to draw on immediately wherever you want it in Europe.

The Midland in Britain.

In Britain, Midland Bank Group is as powerful a banking group as you can get.

Wherever you are you can expect to find us in the neighbourhood because with over 3,200 branches in the United Kingdom there are very few neighbourhoods we aren't in.

And the branch near you won't be just a handy place to cash a cheque in.

In fact, your Midland Branch will offer you a range of financial services you wouldn't ordinarily expect to get from a bank because Midland Bank provides much more than ordinary bank services.

For instance we are a finance company, a leasing company, a factoring company, a merchant bank and a world famous travel agency. (The Thomas Cook Group Ltd.)

And because of this diverse range of

And because of this diverse range of business interests you'll find us a lot more flexible over things that involve money than a bank that's just a bank.

The things we do for business.

For a start if what you want is some capital to work with, we'll lend you a hand on a short, medium or long term basis.

If you have to acquire some capital

If you have to acquire some capital equipment and you want to get more for your money, you'll be interested to know that we can arrange for you to lease anything from office equipment to an

If you're a little concerned about cash flow and the problems of extending credit in a country you've never done business in before, don't worry.

We can offer factoring and invoice discount facilities as well as provide you with credit insurance and give you status reports on any company in the country. If you're setting up with a view to going public in the future you can keep it private because you won't have to go outside the Midland Group to arrange it. We can handle your share issue, advise you on mergers and takeovers and offer you on mergers and takeovers and offer you the full range of merchant bank services.

Once you're operating in Britain and

Once you're operating in Britain and before you spread out to the rest of Europe we'll give you economic assessments of countries, reviews of markets and commodities, advice on methods of payment and access to a special trade register containing thousands of our company contacts in every branch of trade and industry.

To sum up, before you make a move anywhere in Europe we suggest you do one thing now – get in touch with us.

France Said Set

To Grant Aid to

Peugeot, Citroën

PARIS, Nov. 27 (AP-DJ) .- The French government will lend 500 million francs ($105 million) to help Citroën and Pengeot, which are due to merge, the newspaper Le Monde said today.

It said the loan, from the national economic, social and de-velopment fund, would fulfill President Giscard d'Estaing's promise yesterday to take "un-precedented" measures to help the alling auto industry.

The President's promise followed Chroen's announcement Mon-day it would discharge 2,700 of its 53,706-man workforce.

In another development, it was announced that the government has created a committee to study aid to financially troubled businesses. The panel will meet hi-weekly beginning Dec. 1.

BILLION DOLLAR BABY

· By Bob Greene. Illustrated. Atheneum. 364 pp. $10.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

AT first it's intriguing. Here's the Alice Cooper rock in roll group- proud to claim the title of "the sickest, most degenerate band in America"—starring a young man from Arizona Who turns his teen-sge audiences on by chopping up blood-spilling dolls while singing a number called "Dead Babies," fondling a boa constrictor to the tune of Sick Things," and literally spitting on the frenzied fans who crowd and crush each other at the footlights of his performances. And here's Bob Greene, a 27-year-old columnist for the Chicago Sun-Times who's been giveo this chance to perform on a Christmas tour with the Alice Cooper troupe and indulge his fantasy of becoming a rock 'n' roll star. Some fun huh? A slightly worm-eaten but otherwise fresh page from the note-books of George Plimpton. An entertaining chance to see how the rock 'n' roll husiness really

. Then it gets downright amus-ing. Mr. Greene turns out to be a very good reporter, painting in simple primary colors one decep-tively innocent scene after another. Alice Cooper-despite his carefully manufactured image as the monster the parents of teenage America love to hate-is revealed as a witty but mildmannered prototype of the successful kid next door. His real name ts Vince Furnier, he's the son of an Arizona Fundamentalist, he was popular in high school and he likes to play golf. He never touches drugs, he's loath to kill so much as a cockroach, he likes gray-flannel suits, and he regards his success as a horror with wry amusement. So "Billion Dollar Baby" is a study of the put-on, right? An anatomy of the principle that any poblicity is good publicity, so long as the names are spelled correctly.

Then it begins to get disturbing. Though husiness is business and there's no connection be-tween the image and reality, strange things begin to happen. The members of the band grow bored with their dull routine and fall to bickering over Alice's growing superstar status. At the height of the 1973 energy crisis while many Americans are watting in line for a tankful of gas, the 30 members of the Alice Cooper troupe lounge around their chartered superjet, watching pornographic movies and com-plaining over the slightest delay.

Solution to Previous Puzzle

On a one-night stand in Tole Ohio, the audience, tak Alice's monstrous image ; ously, drives the band off stage with firecrackers and or dangerous projectiles. And w the manager, Shep Gordon asked if the band hasn't as for this sort of incident. blandly assures Mr. Greene, I had a child who was tur on by seeing actual nonsimula death, then I'd sit him down talk to him . . . I would try tell him what life means, w life is worth. I think that wo do it." So "Billion Dollar Ba is a study in hypocrisy, hum Pinally, the light dawns, a we see what Mr. Greene is re up to. Half of him may be starry-eyed good-natured fell who befriends the members the band, eats up the exciten of the rock 'n' roll scene a suffers a genuine letdown wi give up his role with the gr the played a Santa Claus walks coto the set at the of the show and then gets kno ed down and stomped by A and the rest of the troupe'. But the other half of him showing us the connections tween the image and the rest At last, when he gets Alice talk seriously, Alice admits: "T know something? I'm not ti down on Nixon . . I the Nixoo's a star. He wouldn't getting that much publicity if wasn't a star. And he's a n star. He'll go dow as one of t biggest personalities ever to co out of the United States, just being so notorious. I think could sit down and talk w Nixon, He's a diplomat, just ! myself . . He could sit do and talk with anybody—even he didn't like them, he con talk to them. He'd probably extremely charming.

At last Mr. Greene shows another member of the ba what that member of t band does is this: he gets dru goes berserk, and smashes sor $4,000 worth of a motel in Utic N. Y. (of course, he's bappy pay for it, and of course the citizens of Utica see it as some thing to talk about after "y boys" have left town).

It takes us a while to cat on. It takes some time to s that Mr. Greene is not in another grouple dike the gi who cluster around the troup plly go to bed with whoever available, whether he's a bar member or a stagehand). He's cultural explorer in search the gap between the image at the reality, and a mapmake trying to prove that the gap, nonexistent. Mr. Greene mi look like a good-natured ligh weight. But when he swings, hits; when he hits, he hurt and "Billion Dollar Baby" know you out.

On the diagramed deal, North and South were Marisa d'Andrea and Luciana Capodana, making an impressive debut on the Italian team. Their Blue Team club system propelled them into an optimistic game. One club showed a strong hand, and the one-spade response promised either three kings, or an ace and a kine

The partnership was now com mitted to game and, as both players held minimum values, the final three no-trump contract was shaky. But since West has tha spade ace and both opposing major suits split four-feur, the game is not easy to defeat.

The Swedish West, Gunilla Linton, did not consider a dia-mond lead, although as it happens that would have done no harm. She had to choose between an attacking lead in spades, a pas-sive lead in hearts, or a sequence lead in clubs. The books suggest that Q J Q 10 x is both con-structive and safe, but the sequel showed that the books are sometimes wrong. The opening lead was the club jack, the right lead in the partnership style rather than the standard queen. Mrs. Capodana won with the king and returned the club seven. This was covered by the ten and ace, and a third club lead forced out the queen. West knew that South had a red ace, and it was presumably the diamond ace in view of t failure to attack that suit in mediately. She would have give a lot to be able to give her parner the spada ace, but as it we she had to hope that her par ner held ace-queen of hear together with the ten or a five card suit. She shifted to hear but south's ten held up on the third round and she had nit

Notice that if West had ma the "safs" lead of a heart, the contract would have succeeded unless East had shifted imm diately to spades, a play the would be difficult to find. U.S. Education's Annual Football Charade

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (NYT) .- For almost 30 years, the 10 culture foundries that make up the Western Conference have been sending a party of scholars to California each winter to help a peer group from one of the Pacific Coast universities promote tourism and sell real estate in Pasadena, Since the Big 10 and Pacific-Eight give shelter to some of the most eminent educators and enlightened administrators in all of academe, it must be true that participation in the Tournament of Roses or the Sugar Bowl or Orange or Cotton or Liberty or Bloe Bonnet Bowls advances the cause of formal education. However, due to a deficient intellect and a variety of character flaws, this bystander has never fully appreciated the importance of those carnivals in the educational system. It would be difficult to measure the indifference aroused here by arguments about which team should go to the Rose Bowl. Still, if the Big 10 athletic directors are going to persevere with their annual cherade, maybe they ought to play by the rules the way the undergraduates are supposed to. When the Western Conference pledged its troth to the Pasadena promoters shortly after World War II, it was provided that no Big 10 team would make the trip two years in succession, even if this sometimes rendered the best team in the conference ineligible. However, postsesson competitions lose their cultural value if the team gets whipped, so that condition was soon expunged. The assignment was to go automatically to the conference champion, and if two or more tied for the tille the athletic directors would pick the one that had gone to the bowl least recently. Another Licking

Two years ago, Ohio State went West as the champion and got smashed. A year ago, Michigan tied Ohlo State in the standing and on the field but the Michigan quarter-back was hurt. Afraid of another licking, the athletic directors chose Ohio State. Lost Saturday, one Ohio State player, a fieldgoal kicker from Czechoslovakia, bea; Michigan, 12-10. Once again the teams finished with identical won-lost records, and once again Ohio State got the votes.

Redneck politicians in state assemblies could take log-rolling lessons from the men who mold young character in Middle America. No more appetizing than their performance is the fact that the athletic directors keep the vote secret, as though they were ashamed of something. If they aren't, maybe they should be.

"The way I hear it," Benny Friedman said yesterday, "there was one vote for Michigan

Redneck politicians in state assemblies could take log-rolling lessons from the men who mold young character in Middle America.

State [which beat Ohio State]. Otherwise the vote would have been 5 to 5 and Michigan would have gone."

"Why didn't you guys go to the Rose be was Michigan's captain and All-American quarterback, Michigan won all its conference games and Friedman-to-Benny Oosterbaan was the most famous passing combination in the world. With such an attraction in Arroyo Seco, Pasadena boosters could have sold cemetery plots to dead men.

"The Big 10 had a rule against postseason play," Friedman said. "We had an eightgame season that ended around Thanksgiving. Today they play 11 games and go to a bowl Why? For money?"

Mention of gold turned the luncheon con versation into another channel. Recently Edward Andrews, president of the University of Vermont, said he would recommend that the college drop football because the game was costing $277,000 a year. Up went a motel sign near the campus: "No football at UVM. No snow in Vermont Unthinkable." Trouble is, no money in the till is not unthinkable, and although Vermont has been playing the game since 1897, Vermont doesn't play it well and there is small doubt that the trustees will go along with Andrew. If they do, Vermont will be the first state university to give up the struggle. Unless some kind of help is forthcoming, it will not be the last.

NFL Participation

Where could colleges find financial support for their athletic programs? Well, there are thousands of corporations and foundations in this country that endow scholarships or make gifts in other form to help develop the physicists, chemists and geolo-gists they will need tomorrow. If American Can and the Nabisco Foundation deem this a wise investment, shouldn't self-interest suggest something to the National Football League?

Owners of professional baseball clubs are not noted for philanthropy, yet baseball has supported its own farm system for a century. Professional football and basketball are practicing parasites fed by the colleges. It has been suggested that if the function of a college is to prepare students for postgraduate life, then perhaps a school can fulfill its purpose by teaching young men how to be linebackers for the Dallas Cow-boys. And if that is so, perhaps it is time the Cowboys bankrolled a few scholarships.

If Football dies at Vermont, can it survive at the University of Massachusetts (beaten this year by UVM)? It is from colleges like UMass that the pros get wide receivers like

NFL Action: Broncos-Lions, Redskins-Cowboys

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, NOV. 27 (NYT).-The National Football League has had a proprietary interest in Thanksgiving Day for more than 40 years, utilizing the holiday as an occasion to put its wares on display. There will be two games tomorrow, Denver at Detroit and Washington at Dallas.

Three of the teams are still in contention for postsesson playoffs, the Broncos being the exception, although chances for Dallas and Detroit are slim. Dallas and Detroit have 6-5 won-lost records; Washington is 8-3 and Denver 5-5 and a tie, Bill Kilmer and Duane Thomas will start at quarterback and running back for the Redskins, with Sonny Jurgensen and Larry Brown, both favoring creaking knees, available for relief duty.

It is also a grudge game, These teams do not like each other and special antagonism exists between Diron Talbert, the freespirited Washington defensive tackle, and Roger Staubach, the Cowboys quarterback.

The Terps will now doublepost Tom Roy, 6-9, and Owen Brown, 6-8, but the big name of the front court will probably be Steve Sheppard, 6-8. The Terps have one of the nation's finest guards in John Lucas and two quality freshmen in Chris Patton, 6-9, and Brad Davis.

At North Carolina, coach Dean Smith has Mitch Kupchak, 6-9, and Ed Stahl, 6-10, to work inside and the flashy 6-4 Walt Davis and Ray Harris in the backcourt. They were all starters on 22-6 team. Only Bobby Jones is gone, but Tom Lagarde, 6-9, will fill the center spot.

Clemson had its first winning season (14-12) in seven years, and now the Tigers will show their stripes. The big name is Wayne Rollins, a 7-foot center who averaged 124 points, 122 rebounds and blocked 106 shots as a freshman, Additionally, coach Tates Locke grabbed up some top recruits in Skip Wise, Stan Rome, Jim Howell and Colon Abraham. Art Buchwald Merci Donnant

(One of the greatest privileges Americans have every November is the opportunity to reread this classic column explaining Thanksgiving to the French which Mr. Buchwald wrote in 1893, when he was 6 years old.)

Az has been our custom through the age- we always honor Thanksgiving Day by explaining it to the French people, who, through no fault of their own, have no holiday to compare

One of our most important holidays is Thanksgiving Day, known in France as Le Jour de

Merci Donnant. Le Jour de Merci Donnant was first started by a group of (pelepilerims rins) who fled from L'Angleterre before the McCarran Act to found a colony Buchwald in the New World (Le Nouveau Monde) where they could shoot Indians (les Peaux-Rouges) and eat turkey (dinde) to their heart's content. They landed at a place called Plymooth (now a famous voiture américaine) in a wooden sailing ship called the Mayflower (or Fleur de Mai) in 1620. But while the pelerins were killing the dindes, the peaux-rouges were killing the pelerins, and there were several hard winters ahead for both of them. The only way the peaux-rouges helped the pèlerins was when they taught them to grow corn (mais). The reason they did this was because they liked corn with their pêle-

In 1623, after another harsh year, the pelerins' crops were so good that they decided to have a celebration and give thanks because more mais was raised by the pelerins than pelerins were killed by peaux-rouges.

Every year on the Jour de Merci Donnant, parents tell their children an amusing story about the first celebration.

It concerns a brave capitaine named Miles Standish (known in France as Kilomètres Deboutish! and a young, shy lieutenant named Jean Alden. Both of them were in love with a flower of Plymouth called Priscilla Mullens (no translation). The vieux capitaine said to the jeune lieute-

"Go to the damsel Priscilla

(allez très vite chez Priscilla). the loveliest maiden of Plymouth (la plus jolie demoiselle de Phymouth). Say that a blunt old captain, a man not of words but of action (un vieux Fanjan la Tulipe), offers his hand and his heart, the hand and heart of a soldier. Not in these words, you know, but this, in short, is my

"I am a maker of war (je suis un fabricant de la guerre) and not a maker of phrases. You, bred as a scholar (vous, qui êtes pain comme un étudiant), can say it in elegant language, such as you read in your books of the pleadings and wooings of lovers. such as you think hest adapted to win the heart of the maiden."

Although Jean was fit to be tied (convenable à être emballé), friendship prevailed over love and he went to his duty. But instead of using elegant language he blurted out his mission. Priscilla was muted with amazement and sorrow (rendue muette par l'étonnement et la tristesse.) At length she exclaimed, interrupting the ominous silence: "If the great captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me, why does he not come himself and take the trouble to woo me?" (Où est-il, le vieux Kilomètres? Pourquoi ne vient-il pas auprès de moi pour tenter sa chance?) ...

Jean said that Kilomètres Deboulish was very busy and didn't have time for those things. He staggered on, telling what a wouderful husband Kilomètres would make. Finally Priscilla arched her eyebrows and said in a tremulous voice: "Why don't you speak for yourself, Jean?" (A chacun son gout.)

And so, on the fourth Thursday in November, American familles sit down at a large table brimming with tasty dishes, and for the only time during the year eat better than the French do. . . .

No one can deny that Le Jour de Merci Donnant is a grand' fête and no matter how well-fed American families are, they never forget to give thanks to Kilometres Deboutish, who made this great day possible.

ummunity Duncan's Farewell to Picasso ummunity management

By Amei Wallach

NEW YORK—Especially in his later years, Pablo Picasso was among the most photographed of men. He was an institution, a world force, the man who changed the way we look at painting-and subject matter worthy of any photographer. So they all shot him, working with intense concentration, clowning, preening, presiding over that so-European, comfortable, cluttered world of his.

In the 30s, David Seymour photographed Picasso painting "Guernica," a statement on the horrors of war, which is at Manhattan's Museum of Modern Art, and which some critics think to be the master's very finest painting. In the '40s, Robert Caps rushed to photograph Picasso in his studio as soon as Capa got to liberated Paris. But it was David Douglas Duncan who made Picasso his own personal subject in the 1950s, when he published his first Picasso book. "The World of Picasso," to be followed in 1962 by "Picasso's Picassos," an inside view of the painter's private collection that made the best-seller list in the United States.

Favorite Subject

Now we have a new decade and a new Duncan book on his favorite subject. "Goodbye Picasso" (Grossett & Dunlap, $35) is somewhat different from the others, however, because it is a book that is as much about David Douglas Duncan as it is about Picasso, who died April 8, 1973. Not one of the photographs is of Duncan. But he is there nevertheless in a distinctive narrator's voice.

Duncan has been a photographer since 1988. He covered World War II, then worked for Life as one of its top men, covering the Soviet Army takeover of Bulgaria, riots in India-great events of that time. But his career as a star, top-of-the-heap photographer really began with the Korean War, which he photographed before anyone else because he was in Japan on assignment when it started. Those photographs won most of the important photography prizes, and resulted in his first book, "This Is War!" Two years ago, they became an important part of his one-man show at the Whitney Museum, the first such show the museum had ever given a photographer. There have been other books, on the Kremlin treasures, on the 1968 presidential conventions and on his favorite prismatic camera techniques. But it is Picasso whom most people, especially the people Duncan cares most to reach, are apt to remember him for. And those are the people in his hometown in Missouri. They're people who are with him in his head and in his camera all the time even at the far-from-Missouri Plaza Hotel, where he sat in the nearly deserted Palm Court one recent morning and talked about

"Look," he said, almost belligerent, he wanted so much to be understood. "My home was Kansas City, strictly Midwest. My involvement didn't include people like Pablo Picasso, I'll tell you. There's a fine museum there, but in my family circle there wasn't anybody who would have cared about Pablo Picasso. They care now. Because of me. They care because I've made him real in Midwest terms. It's as simple as that,"

"It's as simple as that," is one of Duncan's favorite expressions In photographic terms it means reducing things to absolute essentials, to a purity of statement that remains uncluttered with any extra

That's a photographer's photograph," he said, pointing to one that contained two strong masses: Picasso's back and a Picasso plate. "Of all the thousands I've taken of him, this is one of the two or three I'd want to say, This is my photograph of Picasso.' It was my life that supplied that element. In other photographs it was usually Picasso who did. That's what we live by, a process of elimi-

And again, when a reporter selecting pictures for possible reproduction rejected one of Picasso at his easel because it was too predictable, Duncan disagreed. "In one picture, you've reduced Picasso to "This man is so convoluted, but the genesis is all one line," he said. there. The purity of the line. Look at the hand. This is not fist. This is the hand of the creator, not unlike Michelangelo's God."

When Duncan is writing, however, "It's as simple as that" sometimes translates itself into gee-whiz adoration for a man for whom he was, as he says in the foreword, "a more-than-son."

Duncan invested Picasso with every virtue that he thought a man should have: "The happiest house on earth," "simplicity," "fantasy." Some of what he records as virtues are questionable: that Picasso and his mistress (later wife) Jacqueline mirrored every emotion Picasso ever had, or that Picasso never talked about himself, only about his guests

But then, Picaeso already was an institution when Duncan met him on Peb. 8, 1956. "Every day was Christmas," Duncan wrote, and Picasso was accustomed to receiving gifts from well-wishers. Duncan brought him a ring with an ancient carving on it that resembled a Picasso rooster and also a message from their mutual friend Robert Capa, who had been killed in Indochina.

The two offerings won Duncan an invitation to Picasso's home, then upstairs to the bathroom, where the master received his visitor while Jacqueline continued scrubbing his back. It was a beginning. Lump, Duncan's dachshund, helped cement it with his blatant worship asso. The dog later helped create a rift between the photographer, who by then lived near Picasso's Riviera villa, and the

It was all because Lump became paralyzed and Duncan insisted on rushing him to a specialist in Stuttgart, who treated him so well that he lived for another 10 years. Picasso did not feel that life and death and nature's ways should be tampered with and the relationship cooled.

There is so much—although so subtly—of Duncan in the book that it might have been nice to hear something more about his response to this incident. Here was his more-than-father, the personification of so many of his ideals, cutting him off, as Pi later cut off his own children by Françoise Gilot after that former mistress published a revealing book about him. That's what made Picasso so complex a man, in fact. Duncan is reticent about matters that he considers too private. But the idea of such a book, a book that in the end is about a relationship, really demands a great deal more honesty.

During much of his time with Picasso, Duncan remained silent. His camera even had a silent shutter. "I was there to be totally inconspicuous," he said. "A nonpresent personality. I wasn't there interviewing him. I was recording him."

At other times, Duncan became Picasso's eye on the putside world.

Gregarious Person

"When I'd come back from Vietnam, or photographing in the Kremlin, or driving over the Alps in a blizzard. I tried to share it with him. He didn't go out much, although he welcomed guests. He was the most gregarious of people.".

Duncan has the kind of is-this-really-me excitement about his adventures that help make a good descriptive journalist. He can convey the excitement because he feels the excitement. "Sometimes I'm personally motivated, passionate. Why not?" he said. "I go to the DMZ (Demilitarized Zone in Vietnam), my emotions are involved. I don't pretend to be objective. Hell, I'm subjective. I'm not an encyclopedic reporter; I care deeply."

And when he was in the Kremin photographing the treasures he was thinking, "How can a kid from Kansas City be here doing

So it hurts most that while most of the reviews of the book were laudatory, the Kansas City Star took him to task, mainly for what it considered to be a form of namedropping. Because "Goodbye Picasso" is filled with letters to "Dear Alfred" (Barr, former director of the Museum of Modern Art), "Amigo" (actor Yul Brynner) and "Dear Family" (Gary and Maria Cooper).

Most of the book is taken up with photos of the master and his works made in the early years of Duncan's friendship with Picasso. The rift that Lump's illness brought about was healed when Duncan stopped in while on his way to photograph the Marines in Vietnam, "those empty years vanished." But there are few photos from the last years in the book.

What there is is a marvelous record of a relationship that would be fascinating to know more about. Picasso as a man would be someone to know, it seems, and so, perhaps, would Duncan.
